Retail and Online Options

- Home Depot and Walmart provide consumer-grade fiber optic cables for home audio/video and networking, including Toslink optical audio cables and short patch cords, with in-store pickup and delivery options (homedepot.com, walmart.com) .

- Amazon offers a wide selection of fiber optic cables, including Toslink audio cables, LC/SC patch cords, and armored internet cables, with customer reviews and fast shipping (amazon.com) .

Surplus and Discount Options

- Discount Fiber buys and sells surplus fiber optic cables and telecom products, offering flexible quantities, custom orders, and discounted pricing for businesses needing smaller or specialized lots (discountfiber.com) .

Recommendations

- For enterprise or data center applications, consider suppliers like FiberOptic Supply, Cables Plus USA, Fiber Cables Direct, or OmniCable for high-quality, bulk, and specialized cables.

- For home or small office use, Home Depot, Walmart, and Amazon provide convenient options for patch cords and short fiber runs.

- For cost savings or custom lengths, explore surplus suppliers like Discount Fiber or bulk wholesalers like CableWholesale. These suppliers cover a wide range of fiber optic needs, from high-performance singlemode/multimode cables to consumer-grade optical audio cables, ensuring you can find the right product for your project.
